Samuel arrived in hippie Formentera in the 1970s and he's still there. He lives with no electricity in a house on the beach and plays the banjo in a bar. After many years, one day his daughter Anna visits him with his grandson Marc. Anna, who has been unemployed for many years, has to accepted a job in France and must leave her son with her father. The presence of the kid provokes Samuel a return to the shadows of his paradise: a crepuscular, but also inspiring journey.
